Suitable for those Avoiding Shellfish

Advice on shellfish allergy

Shellfish allergies are relatively common, and it can be quite severe, causing anaphylaxis in some cases. Individuals with a shellfish allergy can often react to a number of different types of shellfish, therefore are often advised to avoid all shellfish. This is also partly because there may also be a risk of cross-contamination of different species e.g. during preparation or at fish counters.

Food labelling regulations require pre-packed food to clearly state on the label if it contains shellfish (or if one of its ingredients contains it). All Waitrose own-label products that contain shellfish will also have "shellfish" written in an allergy advice panel on the label.

The information in this booklet is a list of Waitrose products selected according to the criteria described below:

The following list of Waitrose own-label products excludes:

- Shrimps
- Prawns
- Langoustines
- Lobster
- Squid
- Octopus
- Crab
- Crayfish
- Oysters
- Scallops
- Mussels
- Clams
- Any derivatives of shellfish

Lists are updated regularly as recipes may change occasionally. Customers are advised to always check the ingredients lists on pre-packed products and ask for information on products served over the counters.

Waitrose Limited (The Company) has produced this list for the general information of the public. It contains information gathered from various sources and although the Company believes it to be accurate at the time of publication, the Company accepts no responsibility for, and makes no representation nor gives any warranty or undertaking express or implied as to the accuracy or completeness of the list.
